This week has primary changes: Sun moves into Cancer on Thursday, meaning that the affairs governed by Cancer for the year will be under the sway of Jupiter, the Day Lord of Thursday. Moving from Gemini, where the Sun's egotistical side had full sway, into Cancer, where the Sun is sodden and a bit emotional, the focus of outer things will move to Cancerian areas including primary education, agriculture, health care, and patriotism or nationalism. Cancer rules the heart and the light should come to shine on the heart of the matter, whatever it is.

The Greek drama continued at a high pitch into the weekend, and as fitting with last week's chart, once the "No"s won the referendum, the Finance Minister resigned, and was replaced by a new Finance Minister named Euclid, who was able to put some convincing math on paper. The Prime Minister made a complete about-face going from opposing to embracing the harsh measures required to satisfy the European debtors which he had just urged his countrymen to vote against. The deal he accepted and which still has much hard political work to implement was worse than the deal that the referendum rejected, which puts the Prime Minister's own political future into doubt.....

Jupiter itself also is changing signs Monday night, moving into Leo, so an even larger paradigm shift will be felt. Jupiter no longer will be in a 120-degree trine to Saturn, which now takes away some of the frustration Jupiter had felt in Cancer because it saw Saturn ahead of it with its special dristi into the fifth. So even though no longer exalted, Jupiter can do more effective work bringing wisdom, expansion, optimism, and nobility in the sign of the Sun. The combined dristis of Saturn and Jupiter fall nowhere but on the sign Leo itself. Leo thus becomes an energetic support system for the entire zodiac as its outer guardians send their effective gaze into that sign, for roughly the next year. Leo is about power, authority, politics, light, energy, photosynthesis, solar winds, thermal power, lions and lionesses, and the upholding of dharma or righteousness. To strive for magnanimity, magnificence, and munificence is solid now. This is the time to refurbish the throne wherever it is. The dark side of this same energy is bullying and taking pleasure in cruelty, on a mass or individual scale.

Several more subtle changes happen in mid-week. We have the New Moon Wednesday and on the same day Mercury joins Mars as both shift from Ardra nakshatra into Punarvasu, "The Return of the Light," where this legalistic dueling duo comes under the power of the Aditi, the Primal goddess form, where they are urged to create something of material benefit and solid form for the benefit of humans and animals.

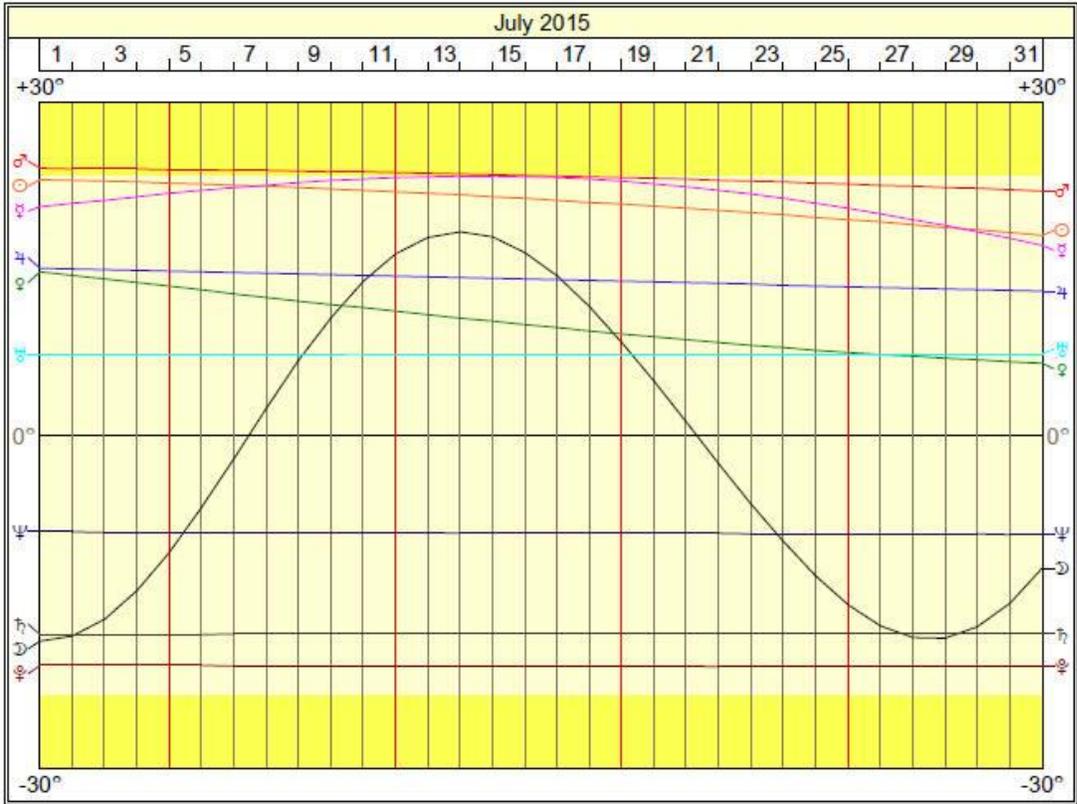

The past weekend gave sports fans a treat as the Wimbledon final pitted the two greats Roger Federer and Novak Djokovic. Roger Federer's chart puts Venus in the spotlight:

yoga for a big heart in the fourth house with Moon and Jupiter. This is enhanced by the mutual rasi dristi with Mars for energy in the 7th house. Mars is the auspicious 5th lord, so by maximizing his work routine and diet he has optimized his power. Rahu is with the Jupiter Moon combination in the 4th house, magnifying the impact of the yoga, which also is placed in the first from Arudha Lagna, giving tremendous harmony to his self-projection. Rahu and Ketu are in each other's Multatrikona signs Pisces and Virgo, and so his work reaches optimum efficiency, especially in the environment of a tennis court where the ball slams back and forth from one side to the other in a real-time mutual exchange!

Market View for the Week (not to be taken as investment advice—strictly opinion)

As expected the SPX did try to fill the gap created by the Greece and other troubles last week, but just failed to get there on Monday. This sets it up for a pierce of the gap and a key reversal without making a new high, so it can continue lower into the Venus station and Sun conjunction in August.
